

SUPERINTENDENT W. J. SAVAGE
SUDDENLY CALLED BY DEATH

The people of San Mateo county, and particularly those in Daly City and Colma, were shocked on Tuesday afternoon last to hear of the sudden death of Professor W. J. Savage, Superintendent of Jefferson Grammar School District.

Mr. Savage attended to his professional duties as usual on Tuesday morning. Indeed, he had been more active than usual, for he had visited each one of the schools in the district that morning. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon he had occasion to visit the local bank and spoke in his usual tone of cheerfulness. He went home to his room to attend to some correspondence, and then stepped out to the mail box to deposit the letters. Upon his return his sister Mrs. Westkamper, noticed that he went back directly to his room, presumably to continue writing. In a few moments she heard a noise as of some heavy object falling on the floor, and thinking that he was perhaps moving a box or some heavy package of books, went up stairs to assist him. She was shocked to find him lying on the floor unconscious. He had fallen from his chair while at work. In a few moments he had passed on.

Professor Savage was born in San Francisco on January 1, 1867, of what he himself proudly termed "sterling old Irish stock."

Soon the family moved to a farm at San Gregorio, and thence to Purissima, where he first attended school. Thence he moved to Half Moon Bay, where he received the remainder of his schooling, and was granted a teacher's certificate by the County Board of Education in December, 1885. He had taken unusual interest in public speaking and in this same year gained an enviable reputation as a debater.

Mr. Savage became principal of the Menlo Park schools in 1887, and served in a like capacity in the Loguna school, and Pomponio school. Then he decided to try his hand at running a country newspaper. In 1897 he returned to his chosen profession as teacher, in the Sheridan school at Mission San Jose. From there he came to the Jefferson school at Colma, as principal, and remained in this position until promoted to the district superintendency of the Jefferson district in 1918, which position he held at the time of his death. He served as a member of the San Mateo County Board of Education continuously since 1893. He made his home with his sister, Mrs. Anthony J. Westkamper, and her husband, to both of whom he was deeply devoted.

Professor Savage was faithful to the trusts committed to him and always measured up to the most exacting requirements. Among the members of his profession he was recognized as an able executive, and an efficient educator. He was the author of "Forward Looking Lessons in United States History," published by the Harr Wagner Publishing Company of San Francisco. This book proved so popular in the schools of California that it reached its fifth edition.

As a teacher Professor Savage always believed in thoroughness and kept in touch with modern thought. He was a deep student of history and political government and took a prominent part in every movement for the social and educational betterment of the community.

He was a member of Daly City Council No. 2712, Knights of Columbus; El Carmelo Parlor No. 256, Native Sons of the Golden West; Vista Grande Aerie of Eagles; Olive Grove No. 116 of the Druids; San Mateo Lodge No. 112 of the Elks; and of the Foresters of America.

Professor Savage was a faithful worshipper at St. Maximus church, Daly City, having been reared in the Roman Catholic faith by a deeply religious mother. He was tolerant in religion towards all creeds, believing that all churches are helpful in promoting the moral and spiritual welfare of the people.

To know Professor W. J. Savage was to love him. He was one of the most considerate of men. Kindness, charity for others, love of justice, were essential parts of his life. It was a pleasure for him to do a kindness to another. There was no selfish motive back of his actions. To him the highest reward came through the joy of being able to say a good word or do a kind act for somebody else. As a result he had a host of friends.

In his immediate work he was exceedingly popular with the teachers and the children. He was a sympathetic leader. Often he would be seen "at the top of the hill" with a group of boys and girls around him. Sometimes he would be sharing candy with them, other times he was chatting pleasantly amid their laughter and play.

To one who did so many acts of friendship, who spoke so many words of kindness, who loved children and was deeply loved by them, as was Professor Savage, surely will be spoken the welcome into the higher and larger life which he has entered: "Come ye blessed of my Father; inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these ye did it unto me."

Professor Savage is survived by a sister, the wife of Mr. Anthony J. Westkamper, of Daly City, and by two brothers, James T. and Robert D. Savage. In their sorrow they have the deepest sympathy of the entire community.

The funeral took place this Friday morning from St. Maximus church, and interment was in the family burying ground at Half Moon Bay.

GRIM REAPER ENTERS HOME,
CLAIMING 5-YEAR OLD BOY

The community is extending deepest sympathy and condolence to Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lowry, of Riesel street, upon the death last Sunday of their dearly beloved five-year-old son, Herbert Mattern Lowry.

Little Herbert had been a pupil in Miss H. Engle's class at the General Pershing school. He was taken ill suddenly and removed to a hospital in San Francisco, where he underwent a very serious operation for the removal of a mastoid, after which spinal meningitis complications set in. The little sufferer passed away at an early hour Sunday morning. Everything that could be done was tried, without avail. He was beloved by all who came in contact with him. He leaves besides his beloved parents a little sister, Anna Mae, to mourn his early passing.

The funeral was conducted from Godeau's, at 41 Van Ness avenue, last Tuesday at 10 A. M. Dr. Keith, of Trinity Methodist church, said the service in the chapel at Godeau's. Cremation at Woodlawn Memorial Park.

ANOTHER DALY CITY PIONEER
COMPLETES EARTHLY LABORS

The family of Karl Schramm are receiving the sympathy of their many friends upon his sudden death on Friday of last week.

Mr. Schramm had been ill for some time, but was not thought to be seriously ill. He had been a resident of Daly City for the past twenty-four years. He leaves to mourn his passing a beloved wife, Dora Schramm, two sons, State Traffic Officer Otto Schramm and Robert C. Schramm, a step daughter, Mrs. Frances Lenehan, and a stepson, Harry P. Gurtler.

The funeral services were conducted last Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co. Interment was in Mt. Olivet Memorial Park.

M. last Tuesday, into the death of Andrew Merlo, a San Francisco fireman, which occurred at Pedro Point last Sunday. The finding of the inquest was that Merlo's death was caused by a ruptured blood vessel of the heart, brought on by over-exertion in the surf.

BUILDING PLANS
BEFORE COUNCIL

On Monday evening, April 13, there was a regular meeting of the City Council, all members answering the roll call, with Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

An ordinance was introduced and read for the first time, prescribing the grade of lumber and the mixture of concrete that should be used in the construction of homes in Daly City. This ordinance is a very important one, and is a progressive step toward making Daly City a city of better homes. The Council has endeavored to give this matter a great deal of study, taking into consideration that a man spends his life-time savings for a home, and should get the best in constructive qualities.

A letter of thanks was received from Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, thanking the Council for the kindness extended to the Post in the free use of the City Hall during their organizing campaign.

The League of Pacific Municipalities brought to the attention of the Council Assembly Bill No. 220, which if passed will put all water, gas and electric meters and testing under the jurisdiction of a municipal sealer of weights and measures. In this matter the Council acted upon the recommendation of the League, who are strongly opposed to the bill.

A. B. Frank, of the Excelsior Merchants' Association, sent in a copy of the letter addressed to the streets committee of the San Francisco board of supervisors, relative to the poor condition of Crocker boulevard, which runs almost parallel with the county line, beginning at Cordova street, in the Crocker-Amazon Park and continuing westerly into Daly City, to connect with the Crocker Tract district in this city. This road was originally built by the Crocker Estate Company, and a goodly portion of it is in San Francisco. Daly City has been carrying on a vigorous campaign against people dumping refuse along this road, resulting in the arrest of a number of offenders, who were forced to clean up the refuse that had been dumped, and in some cases suffered a fine. San Francisco is now checking up on their end of the situation, and will no doubt in the near future take care of this problem.

The installation of a fire alarm tapper in the home of Assistant Chief Chesney was recommended by the Board of Fire Commissioners. The Council approved the recommendation and advised Chief Kennedy to proceed with the work.

A resolution was passed ordering the abatement of weeds, and notices will be posted throughout the city making known that this work will be done and setting the time for protests. It is the desire of the Council to have the weeds cut earlier this year, in an endeavor to eliminate weeds.

A protest was made to the Council by florists and nurserymen of Colma in regard to people selling flowers on Hillside boulevard in Daly City during the month of May, without having any permanent place of business, thus working a hardship on the florist who maintains and operates a business in the vicinity of the year round. The main contention of the protestants was that they can not see how it is fair for these people to come in on such days

AMERICAN LEGION
DANCE APRIL 24

At the dance to be given by Daly City American Legion Post No. 410, at the City Hall, on Friday, April 24, at 8 P. M., Mac's Hay-wire Orchestra will furnish the music. This celebrated orchestra is composed of the following high class musicians and entertainers: Mac, who needs no introduction; Cecil (Rowdy) Wright, singer, dancer, yodeler, who also plays the harmonica and guitar; Ace Wright, singer, dancer, and plays anything with strings; Oklahoma Doc Shahan, singer, dancer, and the only south-paw guitar player in captivity; Chief Tulsa Watie Woodall, violin; Sergeant Jerry Richards, banjo soloist; Al Capilli, accordion soloist; and Buck Buckholtz, drummer, and his famous Sambo, the dancing doll.

This is Daly City Post's first venture in this line, and the members assure you your money's worth.

You've all heard "Mac" over the radio. Here's your chance to see and hear him in person. Tickets are on sale at McGraw's Pharmacy, or can be had from any member of the Post at 50 cents each.

The Ladies' Auxiliary meeting held Friday night, April 10, in Eagles Hall, was very well attended, this being their initial meeting in their new quarters. Several new members were signed up and the unit is to be congratulated on its healthy growth. Friday, the 17th, was the big topic, as the ladies are putting a lot of effort into making the "Get Together" on that night a gala event.

A number of the members are going to the St. Claire Hotel, at San Jose, on April 25, for luncheon and to witness the exemplification of a model initiation by Unit No. 21, of Watsonville.

Do you remember when the supply Sergeant gave you underwear that fit you. WE DON'T.

Last Sunday's horseshoe contest was rather a close fought affair. There were a dozen players and every game played wound up with a score of one or two points removed from being a tie. The games started at 10:30, and 1:30 saw the boys still doing battle. It's quite an institution, especially now that the boys carry everything in the way of rules from six inches to five feet long, as well as calipers, with which to gauge the close ones.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY PARTY

A group of friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. Byrne, of Irvington street, gathered at their home last Saturday night and gave Mr. Byrne a surprise party in honor of his birthday. The evening was spent in playing cards. A midnight supper was enjoyed by the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. E. Byrne, Mrs. D. Krause, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Eason, Mr. and Mrs. John Caine, and Mr. and Mrs. L. Davis.

as May day or Mothers' day and get the cream of the business, without paying a peddler's license. The Council assured the florists that this matter would be given immediate attention.

The monthly health report was read and ordered filed.

Bills for labor at the City Park was read and ordered paid.

LOCAL NINE WINS
IN EASY FASHION

By HAROLD MARTIN

Daly City chalked up Number One in the win column last Sunday, defeating the Golden Gate Aerie of Eagles by a 10 to 1 score on the Jefferson high school diamond. This was the Merchants' second start of the season.

Manager Ed Cavagnaro's new pitching staff, Bill "Hayshaker" Thompson and Bud Manuel, displayed too much class for the opposition. Thompson allowed the Eagles two hits and no runs in the seven innings he twirled, while Manuel had the same number of bingles and a single tally marked against him. The former struck out nine men and the latter four.

Almost perfect support was accorded the Merchants' pitchers to make the victory more impressive. Only one fielding error was charged against the local team and no less than five sparkling plays were recorded. Joe Albrecht, left fielder, caused a great deal of comment on his high class work. He was credited with three of the best catches of the day, all of which cut off possible rallies. Rettig and Cameron turned in good throws to make the day complete.

Clouting Johnson's offerings for a total of thirteen hits, the Merchants established some kind of an early season record. In not a single inning did they fail to obtain at least one bingle. Rettig, Albrecht, Toole, and Thompson divided batting honors with two safeties each. Rettig's triple in the eighth frame was the hardest blow of the game.

Daly City got off to a flying start, scoring three runs in the initial frame. Three walks, Al Toole's hit, a wild pitch and three stolen bases made up the attack. Toole singled again in the third inning and scored after Bonetti bunted and Johnson threw the ball over second base.

Hits garnered by Albrecht, Bonetti and Cameron, coupled with a base on balls, drove across three men in the fifth. Rettig singled in the following inning, went to second on a sacrifice by Trowbridge, stole third, and scored on Albrecht's fly to right field. The ninth and tenth runs came in the eighth frame. Manuel, Rettig, Kelly, and Albrecht's hits constituted the barrage.

Manager Cavagnaro used fourteen players during this game. Two former Jefferson high school stars, Jack Gibbons, first baseman, and Hugh Smith, catcher, played errorless ball in the two innings they worked. Roy Kelly, a bright prospect, roamed the center field patch, and surprised the fans with a clean single in his only time at bat.

Have you paid your city taxes? If not, you are reminded by Tax Collector John T. Doyle and City Clerk B. C. Ross that after next Monday, April 20, all the unpaid portion of the remaining one-half of the taxes will be delinquent and thereafter an additional 5 per cent will be collected. Also an additional 5 per cent will be collected on all unpaid first installments of taxes.

GAS STATION/ROBBERD

The Daly City Gas Station, located on Mission street, near the Bank of America, was broken into last Tuesday night by unknown marauders, who broke a window in the station and reached in and stole five cartons of cigarettes. The robbery occurred between 11:30 P. M. and 5:30 A. M.

ROLPH HANDICAP
FEATURE OF MEET

Thousands of sport lovers are expected to descend on Tanforan race track tomorrow (Saturday) to witness one of the keenest racing contests ever held in California, and to honor Governor James Rolph, Jr., who with Mrs. Rolph and his party will be guests of the Pacific Coast Breeders Association for the races.

Featuring the day will be the Governor James Rolph, Jr., handicap, which will be sponsored by Mrs. Rolph, who will present a loving cup, donated by the association, to the winner of the race. In addition a $5,000 purse will be at stake.

Such internationally famous mounts as Bud Broom, star New Yorker, and Challenger II, $100,000 English steed, are likely starters in the big event, which will lure the cream of California horses. The race will be run over an unusual six furlong course, and should be the most interesting of the big purse races yet staged at Tanforan.

An added feature tomorrow (Saturday) will be the fourth event, to be run over a seven and one-half furlong course, starting directly in front of the club-house. This should prove a decided attraction to the patrons of this enclosure, who include some of the state's most prominent society folk.

Announcement was made this week that the Breeders Association is planning the construction of a new club house at Tanforan, to be located on the site between the present club house and the grandstand. The old club house will then be turned over to a new racing group to be organized in California and patterned after the famous Turf and Field Club at Belmont in New York. Construction of the new building is expected to start this summer and officials of the track say it will be ultra-modern, including all improvements and innovations known to race track construction.

MERCHANTS MEET
LOMITA PARK NINE

One of the closest matched amateur baseball games booked this week in the bay area will be enacted Sunday, on the Jefferson high school diamond. The Daly City Merchants' nine will open a two game series with the Lomita Park fire department nine. The battle starts at 2:30. Come out and see a good game.

Manager E. McDonald's colorful team promises to give the local aggregation plenty of trouble. The visiting nine has won five of the last six games. Last Sunday the McIntosh Clothiers were taken into camp by a score of 3 to 2.

A Daly City victory will depend on the brand of pitching displayed by Thompson and Manuel. Manager Cavagnaro plans to start the "Hayshaker" if he is in condition. Manuel will toe the slab at the first indication of weakness by Thompson. Bud gave signs of possessing plenty of stuff in last week's game. He twirls from the port side.

The probable starting lineups are: Lomita Park—Parraguez, ss; Cochran, cf; McDonald, 2b; Mann, lf; Cooper, 3b; Stettler, 1b; Schultz, c; Webster, rf; Nelson, p; Wright, rf; E.-Cox, 2b.

FIREMEN'S MINSTREL SHOW
SCHEDULED FOR APRIL 22

The Firemen's Minstrel Show will be held next Wednesday, April 22. In keeping with the recent announcement of presenting a real, snappy, old time minstrel show, the Associated Firemen of San Mateo County have made final preparations and are ready to offer the theatre-loving public an evening's entertainment replete with exceptionally good songs, spicy jokes, refreshing comedy and feature numbers that are a "knock-out."

In presenting this wonderful show the Associated Firemen have in mind only one thought, and that is to give a show worth while—not "just another show." The performance will open with a number of specialty acts which promise to meet with general approval. The artists in the cast of the Minstrel Show are well trained to the particular parts they are to play. You will be surprised at the ease and smoothness of the harmony of the company in the rendition of a long list of numbers.

The firemen urge you to reserve next Wednesday evening, April 22, for a date at the State Theatre, where you will enjoy a real good show. Look for program at your door Saturday.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

In the passing of Professor W. J. Savage, Superintendent of the Jefferson grammar school district, Jefferson Union high school has lost one of its staunchest friends. No opportunity was ever missed by Professor Savage to render our high school the service which he alone could render. He was largely responsible for the selection of the site of the school, and he always spoke of it with pride. The closest co-operation existed between Professor Savage and Principal Ferguson. His death is a great loss to Jefferson.

An assembly was called at 9:30 Tuesday morning by Mr. Ferguson, in observance of the first Pan-American day. Mr. Clive Saiz, instructor in American Government and Civics, was called upon to announce the nature of the radio program to be presented and stated briefly the significance of the day. The students and faculty listened to President Hoover's address which he delivered before the representatives of most of the republics of the Americas. The delegates were seated in the Hall of the Americas in the Pan-American building in Washington. Following the president's message of good will, Secretary of State Stimson spoke. He was followed by the Mexican Ambassador, Manuel Tellez. Music was furnished by the United States Navy band.

The Senior play will be presented on Friday evening, April 24. A four act comedy is being presented this year. An unusually large cast is working diligently on the production under the direction of Clive M. Saiz, instructor in dramatics. Leading roles have been assigned to Madeline Smith, Lorraine Nichols, Fae Ford, William Jaques, and Leonard Muller.

Next week there will be celebrated throughout the state of California, Public Schools week. The purpose of this celebration is to get the schools and the public in closer touch. In some schools there will be special programs during the day sessions and in others there will be programs in one form or another during evening sessions. Jefferson Union High Schools will have open house for the parents on Wednesday evening, April 22, from seven until nine o'clock. The evening will be divided into regular class periods, but instead of recitations being conducted the teachers will explain to the parents the different subjects that their children are taking in high school, and tell them how the children should study, how much time each subject requires for preparation, etc. The parents will be able to meet all of their children's teachers and ask any questions they desire regarding the studies offered in the school. A general invitation is being given to the parents and patrons of the high school throughout the whole district, and it is hoped that there will be a one hundred per cent attendance of the parents.

Last week when Principal James Ferguson and Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. Stella Jensen, Clerk of the Jefferson Union High School Board of Trustees, were in Sacramento on school business, they called on Governor Rolph and expressed neighborly greetings from the Governor's friends in the Jefferson Union High School District. The Governor received them most cordially, and insisted upon their visiting his executive office.

In a spectacular 11 inning game of baseball Jefferson defeated San Mateo 8-7. Petrocchi and Opperman of Jefferson got two hits in four tries. Tom Long hit a home run in the third inning that sailed over the left-fielder's head. Matson for San Mateo also got a homer in the fifth inning.

In the first inning San Mateo got four runs while Jefferson got three. The battle raged hotly throughout the game and in the ninth Pastorino stole two bases and was brought home by Petrocchi's hit, thus tying the score. In the tenth neither team scored, but in the eleventh Opperman scored from third on Jaques' double to center.

Jefferson was defeated 69-26 in a track meet with Balboa last Thursday. For a beginning team Jefferson did well. The stars for Balboa were Curley, Baston and Pyle. Curley was high point man with 11 points. Behiels, SoRelle and Harper starred for Jefferson, Behiel getting 6 points, SoRelle 5 and Harper 5.

Last week end Jefferson sent six official delegates to the California Scholastic Press Association gathering under the management of the Sigma Delta Chi. The students got many ideas from the round table discussions that were held for this purpose. While there the students attended an Ax rally held by the California students. Some of the speakers at the convention were: Ad Shuster, editorial writer and columnist of the Oakland Tribune; Everett J. Brown, editor of the Blue and Gold, California's annual; William Leiser, sports writer for the Examiner; and several other newspaper writers of the bay region.

Jefferson also sent delegates to

FOREIGN WARS VETS SELECT DRILL LEADER

The members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Old Glory Post, met at Masonic Hall on April 10, at 8 P. M. The hall was well filled with veterans of many wars and expeditions of the United States forces. Comrade Refatti was unanimously elected Captain of the new drill team, which will be formed in the near future. This degree team will be a good asset to the Post.

Major Robert Rodgers presented the Post with two historic sabers. One was used by Captain Robert Rodgers, who was later made a General in the war with Mexico in 1848. The other was used by Colonel John D. Rodgers in the Spanish-American and Philippine insurrection in 1898. General Rodgers was Major Rodgers' grandfather, and Colonel Rodgers his father. Thus it was a great honor to Old Glory Post No. 2044 to receive such historic sabers.

One big whist party will be given by Old Glory Post and the Ladies' Auxiliary at Masonic Hall on April 24, the public being invited.

Post Junior Vice-Commander-in-Chief Henry Leavitt gave an interesting talk in regard to the National Home in Eaton Rapids, Mich. This home is maintained for the widows and children of deceased veterans of foreign wars of the United States. Comrade Merton Hubbard, Commander of Joseph P. McQuade Post No. 1205, San Francisco, was also an honored visitor who gave an interesting talk on degree team work.

The meeting was closed at 11:30, after which refreshments were served by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

The Ladies' Auxiliary held their meeting in the Masonic Hall banquet room. Among the honored visitors were Mrs. Nancy Smith and her daughter Alfreda, who are members of General Jacob Smith Post No. 83 San Francisco, and Mrs. L. Sampson, member of San Francisco Auxiliary No. 58. Thanks are due the visitors for their help in the floor work. There the C. S. F. convention held in Palo Alto last Saturday. There were more than 200 delegates from the various central region chapters of the Scholarship Federation. Santa Cruz was chosen as the place of the next convention. Also the officers for the coming term were elected as follows: Chairman, Carl Fisher, Santa Cruz; Assistant Chairman, Jim Logan; Secretary, Mary Farrington; Treasurer, Norman McKay; Publicity Manager, Phillip Perdue. "C. S. F. Hints" was the subject of a talk given by Miss Hazel Wolhaupter, president C. S. F., San Mateo high school.

were many fine ideas brought to the attention of the members for the uplift of the organization. And it was amazing to observe the manner in which the new members took part in the work. The ladies wish to thank Mrs. Della Campbell and Mrs. Agnes Bailey for arranging the hall in the afternoon.

Each member was able to voice an opinion on ways of benefitting the uplift of the Veterans of Foreign Wars organizations throughout the United States. The president spoke on the welfare of our veterans who may be in need or distress at any time.

Commander Merton Hubbard, of Joseph McQuade Post No. 1205, San Francisco, was escorted into the meeting room and presented the Auxiliary with a gavel donated by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Hubbard, Past President of McQuade Auxiliary No. 1205, and who is now Department Guard for the convention this year. It was with regret that Mrs. Hubbard was not able to attend this meeting.

The meeting was adjourned at 11 P. M., with the expression of contentment on each lady's face, knowing that their time was well spent, with the slogan, "Let's put Old Glory Auxiliary over the top."

The next meeting will be held on Friday, April 24, at 7:15 sharp, in order to start the whist party at 8:30.

SIDELIGHTS

Roy W. Howard, dynamic head of the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain, who recently added the late great Joseph Pulitzer's New York World to his organization's holdings, may reflect with a smile on an incident in his early career. Once when working for Pulitzer on the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, young Howard asked for a $3 a week raise in salary, which was refused. He quit the job and got a better one; has had many better ones since.

It has long been suspected that lusty individuals who perform heroic bathing stunts often do so with a view to developing a superiority complex. Miss Ellen Wilkinson, a member of the English parliament, recently referred to this foible of her countrymen in the following tart remark: "The typical Englishman is a strong being who takes a cold bath in the morning and talks about it the rest of the day."

March 10 was the biggest business day the United States Treasury has seen since the war, but there was no net profit for Uncle Sam. On that day transactions reached a total of more than three billion dollars, of which more than a billion and a half represented bonds and notes issued, more than a billion in debts were paid off, and half a billion was received in income tax payments. A minor incident of the day's business was the payment of thirty million dollars as interest on the public debt.

California's two statues in Statuary Hall in the capitol at Washington, otherwise known as the "Hall of Fame," were recently unveiled. This state's contribution is unique in that both of the personages so honored were clergymen—Thomas Starr King, a Protestant minister, and Junipero Serra, a Catholic priest of the Franciscan order. Rev. King labored to prevent the secession of California during the Civil war and was instrumental in organizing the Sanitary Commission, which rendered service similar to that of the present Red Cross. Father Serra established 21 missions in the state and his life was one of devotion and sacrifice in the interest of the common people.

Passenger business has not been so good on a 33-mile branch of the Erie railroad between Niles and Lisbon, Ohio, according to information recently furnished the state utilities commission. In 1929 a total of but thirteen passengers paid $5.70 in fares, but the depression or something caused a slump to seven passengers paying $3.15 in 1930. The railroad asks permission to discontinue passenger service on this part of its line, a request that seems reasonable under the circumstances.

The state of Massachusetts permits highway signs along farms to advertise products raised or sold on the premises. When a brush manufacturer erected his billboards along the farms where hogs were raised he claimed they were within the law because hog bristles were used in his brushes. A court thought his argument was a trifle far-fetched and ordered the signs removed.

It may not be generally known that all of the 120 billion cigarettes produced in the United States last year, as well as those of former years, were wrapped in paper imported from France. Now two American brothers, Louis and William Schweizer, have learned how to manufacture paper equal to the French product at lower cost, it is said. Their chief difficulty will be to convince cigarette manufacturers that the home produced paper is really just as good.

Mme. Virginie Heriot, outstanding yachting enthusiast of France, has been honored by the ministry of marine for her nautical achievements.

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

At last a real economic value has been found for old, cast-off shoes. They make good coyote feed. This may sound like a ridiculous statement, but it is the truth, nevertheless, and the late Mr. Don Coyote has offered up his stomach as proof of the assertion. Perhaps and explanation is in order.

It seems that the deputies of the Division of Fish and Game are making a mighty close study on what some of these alleged marauders are supposed to eat. Any animal or bird, now in bad graces with the loving public, that happens to get especially inquisitive around the various game districts is certainly flirting with a ticket to unknown places.

Now that there are so many quail sanctuaries established throughout the state the campaign has been especially rigid. Of course, the mountain lion is not included in this class, because he is hunted the year around by state lion men and it is not necessary to ascertain the source of his food—any deer hunter can tell you that.

But to get back to the coyote question, the old shoe discovery was made the other day in the office of the Division of Fish and Game at San Francisco by Doanal D. McLean, field naturalist. A deputy had killed a coyote and, according to instructions, shipped the stomach and contents to the office.

A thorough investigation revealed that the stomach contained a large percent of various kinds of rodent fur and bones. There was also a varied assortment of chicken feathers and rabbit fur. But the real climax came when McLean uncovered a chunk of cloth lining from a shoe and a large, shriveled section of leather. No evidence of game birds was found in this fellow.

"WIDE OPEN" GAMBLING AND THE GAME PRBLEM

California's fish and game problems along the Nevada border will probably be greatly accentuated by the recent "wide open" gambling laws enacted by our sister state, according to a statement of a prominent sportsman. Wardens of the Division of Fish and Game have already reported the presence of many new faces throughout the section, especially in the Tahoe district, and by the arrival of the summer vacation months the highways will undoubtedly be greatly congested.

Although most of these travelers will be primarily interested in the exciting "wild west" activities on the other side of the border, it is reasonable to believe that a large majority will take rod and gun along as a means of additional amusement.

This condition is bound to create a large amount of traffic back and forth across the mountains, and unless reasonable care is taken, the wild life is faced with an exterminating menace in these areas. Such heavy concentrations of sportsmen and travelers in an area invariably create vital problems and the full co-operation of everyone is needed to control the situation.

Travelers must be especially careful in regard to starting forest fires. This warning may seem to be rather premature, yet reports have already come to the division of a serious fire in the state.

HUMANE SUNDAY OBSERVANCE

Reports to the headquarters of Be Kind to Animals anniversary and Humane Sunday committee at San Francisco indicates a very general observance of the week this year.

The week of April 19 to 25 has been set aside for the observance in every part of the United States as Be Kind to Animals anniversary. April 19 has been designated as Humane Sunday.

Clergymen have been supplied with literature for the preparation of sermons for Humane Sunday.

While several forms of endeavor are being undertaken in the different states by the American Humane Association, which has charge of the nation-wide Be Kind to Animals anniversary campaign, it is specializing in an effort to have humane sermons or special Sunday school exercises to be given in the churches on April 19.

1930 BUILDING BY P. G. & E. EQUALS HOOVER DAM COST

The Six Companies, Inc., of San Francisco broke into the headlines the other day when they signed a contract to build the Hoover Dam "and appurtenant works" on the Colorado river. It's a big job—six and a half year's work at a cost of $48,890,995.

But there are other big jobs, not so spectacular perhaps, but just as big. Here's a comparison from the Pacific Gas and Electric Company's own files:

In 1930, in one year, not six and a half, the P. G. & E. spent $48,848,744 in new construction. That's within $42,250 of the Hoover Dam contract. Note the figure again: $48,848,744, spent in one year to build new and additional power houses, substations, gas lines and other facilities, not at some distant place, but right here in Northern California.

The last word in ambulances is reported from Winston-Salem, N. C., where a new vehicle of this type is equipped with an electrically heated blanket, an electric fan, a babybasket, hot and cold running water, and a radio set. Perhaps the radio will be used to give the victim a safety-first talk as he is carried to the hospital.

Yet this section gang is part of a vast organization of 52,000 workers—whose efficiency enables the railroads of California to transport 40 million passengers and 52 million tons of freight annually.

To pay this army of California workers $95,000,000 in annual wages, and to meet other operation costs, money received from the sale of tickets and collection of freight charges must be accumulated in the banks of the state.

Dated: April 13, 1931.

E. B. HINMAN,

Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, San Mateo County, California.

April 17, 24; May 1, 1931.

California immediately after the World war, when he learned of the crisis which was confronting the public school system in America. There was a dearth of competent teachers, schools were being closed, children, particularly in the rural communities, were being denied the education to which they are entitled, and there was a deplorable apathy concerning the remedial measures which had been proposed.

To focus the attention of the craft in California on the existing condition, the Grand Master set aside a week to be observed as Public Schools Week, and expressed the hope that during that week in every Masonic lodge in the jurisdiction some phase of the question affecting the public schools would be presented by competent speakers appointed for that purpose.

The result was extremely gratifying. There was apparently an almost universal compliance with the desire expressed by the Grand Master in his proclamation; and throughout the State of California and in the Hawaiian Islands public meetings were held to which the families and friends of the brethren were invited. Public educators everywhere gave their most earnest co-operation and were loud in their praise of what the Masonic fraternity was doing to awaken the public in general to a realization of existing conditions.

Such was the success that, although the crisis has passed, each succeeding Grand Master continued the observance, and it has now become a firmly established activity of the Grand Lodge. There has been, however, a material change in the scope and purpose, as well as the form, of the observance.

Public Schools Week has become a community affair; and in many communities it is the outstanding feature of the school year. The meetings are now public in every sense of the word and are held in school buildings.

The most prominent educators in the state willingly and gladly accept invitations to speak at the public meetings. The selection of the subject of the address is left to the judgment of the speaker and the local committee. The only restriction is that in no event shall there be any controversy with respect to any controversy between individuals or groups in the community, even though it be in connection with or grow out of public school matters.

Evidence of the development of the observance into a community affair is furnished by the fact that not only is there a proclamation issued by the Governor of the state calling attention

FIESTA DE LAS ROSAS HISTORICAL PAGEANT

The grand floral parade, outstanding event of the Santa Clara County Fiesta de las Rosas, in which nearly seventy-four flower-decorated floats will be seen, will be held in San Jose on Saturday afternoon, May 16, at 2:30 o'clock. Fiesta directors announced it a recent meeting.

Spurred evidently by the spirit of California Fiesta Year, more interest is shown in the Fiesta this year than has been evidenced in the five years of the event, directors declare.

More than half the floats desired for the parade have already signed up and the event is still a month away. Nearly two score bands and drum corps and unusual features have also indicated their desire to be a part of the parade.

Athletic events, which include a golf tournament at Hillview Club in San Jose, are new on the program this year. Wrestling, boxing, a state bowling tournament, kite fighting, swimming, bicycling and similar events are included by the Fiesta-Junior Chamber Athletic committee which is handling the sports.

The baby parade, in which 150 children are expected to ride in flower decorated floats, will be held on the afternoon of May 15 in San Jose. Babies from Santa Mateo, Santa Cruz, San Benito, Santa Clara, Lower Alameda and Monterey counties are invited to enter. Beauty and health prizes will be awarded in four classes under four-years-old.

The Fiesta Pandango, a giant street celebration in the heart of the city, will close the Fiesta on the night of May 16. Music will be provided for street dancing and a burlesque floral parade will be held.

To it, and advising people of the opportunity to obtain first hand information of their schools, but similar proclamations are issued by mayors and Common Councils throughout the state.

This year the American Legion of California joins with chambers of commerce, Parent-Teachers' organizations, service clubs and other civic, fraternal and commercial bodies in the various communities of the state in the observance of Public Schools Week.

"The Marriage of Josepha," a historical pageant of Santa Clara county 100 years ago, the Queen's ball and similar events are also to be held during the three Fiesta days, May 14, 15, and 16.

FARRELL CREDITS SUCCESS TO DALY'S SOUND ADVICE

"If I only had a million dollars—" How many times have most of us sighed and audibly or at least mentally expressed that wish.

But the possession of great wealth, especially when we have not earned it, does not always bring happiness, as is convincingly proved in Raoul Walsh's Fox Movietone drama, "The Man Who Came Back," in which Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell are co-starred.

In this story, the only son of one of New York's wealthiest men finds himself slipping rapidly on the downward path as the result of having every wish gratified without the slightest effort on his part.

Farrell, who plays the role of the young man, is a strong believer in the "self-made man" principle.

"When I finished high school and wanted to go to college," he said, "my father gave me a little lecture. He was in moderate circumstances, but he wanted to implant in me the idea of earning my own way. He told me he could afford to send me to school, but he believed it would be doing me an injustice.

"You're strong and healthy," he said, 'and if you don't learn now that the only real enjoyment you'll ever get in life is from what you make of yourself, you never will.' "So I went to college and earned my own way. Anything I am today,

To keep a wife young and happy

....give her a modern kitchen

Cook with Electricity—the modern way

Many wives spend long hours in a kitchen through whose single window the sun seldom shines.

After a few years of such monotony, is it any wonder that wives lose their good nature?

The electric range is famous for giving women more hours of leisure—to form social contacts or to be spent in the sunshine. For the electric range cooks automatically. Simply prepare the food—place it in the oven—set the controls and go your way. When you return, hours later, the meal is perfectly done—hot—and ready to serve.

Electric cooking is speedy because of the new cooking elements. As for cost of operation—that averages about 1c per meal per person. The cost of the electric range itself is no more than that of any other good range.

A small payment down will place the electric range of your choice in your kitchen, ready to use. Come into our office or a dealer's store and see the beautiful new electric ranges.

BETTER TIMES AHEAD

With commodity prices at bargain levels and great new reserves of savings piled up by bank depositors throughout the country, it will not be long before they will begin to withdraw at least a part of these funds for purchases they can no longer postpone.

This situation was cited last week by a prominent business man as a reason for his conviction that general business recuperation is getting under way. He also said:

"The program this country went through in 1921 will be re-enacted. We can expect unemployment to wane as purchasing power waxes. Production and distribution will also gain."

An unusual and striking indication of the way the wind is blowing is the formation in New York of four short-term fixed investment trusts in which shareholders plan to benefit from gains in stock values, rather than from stock yields. Evidently these financiers are convinced that the downward trend has ended and that their securities now are ready for a steady climb.

Urged by his sweetheart to reform, a young New York burglar agreed to compromise by becoming a plumber.

Sometimes one may get rid of a pest by lending him a little money.

CONNECTICUT JUSTICE

Peace officers and a court in Hartford county, Connecticut, recently set a record which deserves high commendation in a land where "the law's delay" is a standing reproach.

Three young men in that county carried out their plans to rob a bank by hiding in the building over-night and forcing the cashier to open the vault for them upon his arrival next morning. They obtained $13,000 and escaped in a fast automobile.

An alarm was broadcast with the result that all three of the robbers were caught in a short time. The unusual part of the story is that they were tried, convicted, sentenced and had entered upon their prison terms within thirty hours after their crime was committed.

It is generally conceded by criminologists that the most effective method of reducing crime is to make its punishment swift and sure. Unfortunately, our system of criminal procedure, with its maze of technicalities and opportunities for delay, makes prompt punishment extremely difficult if not impossible.

The Connecticut authorities have set a fine example for the rest of the country, and if such procedure could be adopted generally our crime problem would speedily lose its menacing aspect.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS WEEK

On Monday, April 20, begins the twelfth annual observance of California Public Schools Week. Originally instituted in 1918 to call the attention of the public to the critical condition of the schools due to a shortage of teachers caused by the war, the idea of bringing the people generally into closer touch with their schools proved increasingly popular. The celebration is now an established annual institution during the last week of April.

In general the week is devoted to informing the public and the parents of children especially, of the real condition of our schools, with discussions of courses and methods of study and costs of education. Exhibits of the work of pupils is a feature, with parents encouraged to visit their schools as well as to attend meetings.

While, in a newer educational day, the "Three R's" still remain the fundamentals of education, the primary purpose of the annual week is to bring the newer school methods before the attention of the generation of the original "Three R's."

Modern school men, and those interested in the educational responsibilities of our present generation of pupils, center their work on the following major principals, all however, with definite relation to the "Three R's": Character development, because character determines the nature of the impulse of the growing child; health and physical efficiency, because the training of children in healthful living is one of the most ancient of educational objectives; good citizenship, because it is important that our children learn the practice of good citizenship while still in school; training for home life; vocational efficiency, by which it gives training in the handicrafts and practical arts; the worthy use of leisure, because without adequate recreational features no educational system could be possible in this newer day, and general mental efficiency, which means the ability to concentrate and to think clearly.

Throughout the general scheme of public schools week, by school exhibits, addresses, and other graphic presentations, these objectives are exemplified for the benefit of parents and the community at large for the better understanding of the educational principles underlying the modern training of our young men and women during the formative period of their lives.

WOMEN SCORE AGAIN

If someone had suggested a few years ago that a 27-story clubhouse or hotel for women exclusively could be operated in New York City or anywhere else at a profit, he would probably have been met with the counter suggestion that his head ought to be examined.

But, through the efforts of the 5,000 members of the American Woman's Association, that very thing is being done by the A. W. A. Clubhouse in Manhattan, which in the depression year of 1930 showed a net profit of $84,386.42, after paying all operating charges, interest and taxes.

Built for the purpose of providing a home in New York City for business and professional women, as well as transient women guests, the A. W. A. has become popular to the extent of showing a 20 per cent higher occupancy than the average hotel in that city, according to leading hotel accountants. The big clubhouse was opened in March, 1929, and was a success from the first.

The excellent management shown is only another evidence of women's increasing significance and prominence in the industrial world. The 1930 census showed ten million women engaged in gainful occupations. It is estimated that women control 41 per cent of the nation's wealth, and direct the expenditure of more than 85 per cent of its money. More women than men hold stock in the country's largest corporations, and their savings deposits increased seventy million dollars in seven years.

Women now seek the interest and profit of business and professional life as eagerly as men do, and what may be disconcerting to the old-fashioned male of the species is that they usually make good.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.
 That if you want your home city to keep moving ahead in the march of progress, you should have its name engraved on your heart.

If you want prosperity to stay with it, you should pep up and keep pepped up.

You should be proud of it.
 You should swear by it.
 You should work for it.
 You should spend your time and money for it.

You and every other citizen should work hand in hand for its advancement.

When all do this, there is no limit to what you can do to make it a better place in which to live and prosper.

It will then be a place in the world that will attract the attention of investors, new industries, and home-seekers in such numbers that will bring prosperity to the entire city.

A heretic is a fellow who doesn't believe in our pet superstitions.

THE CONCEITED DRIVER

Conceit, which often finds expression in thoughtlessness, rudeness and selfishness, is considered of prime importance as a cause of automobile accidents, by Dr. Paul Schroeder, Illinois state criminologist.

"An appreciation of the rights of others on the highways appears to be a more important qualification of a driver than even normal intelligence," he says.

Dr. Schroeder's opinion is backed up by statistics. He recently made a study in Detroit of 100 prisoners convicted of manslaughter with an automobile. Only three had serious physical defects, one was subject to epilepsy and one was insane. The old idea that anyone in good health and with reasonable mental qualifications can drive an automobile safely no longer holds water. The ego-centric driver, disregarding all but himself, taking chance after chance, whether he be mentally a genius or a moron, is a constant menace to life and property.

A little old-fashioned courtesy, which amounts to regard for the rights of others, is the individual cure for the conceited driver. He presents a problem that must be solved, as he is responsible for a large part of the motor accidents.

The year 1931 opened with a record-breaking motor fatality toll—2,410 deaths in January, an increase of 30 per cent over January, 1930. Here is grisly proof of the need for thorough-going investigation into every phase of the accident situation.

MONUMENT TO FULTON

A link between France and the United States which has seldom come to notice is recalled now with the forming of a committee in Paris to raise a monument to Robert Fulton, the American inventor of the steamboat. The monument is to stand at Plombieres, a famous watering place in the Vosges mountains, on the eastern border, where Fulton was a visitor in 1802.

It was at Plombieres, according to the old records, that Fulton's theory of steam propulsion for ships had its first practical trial. Fulton went to France in 1802 and was a guest of a long-time friend of his, Joel Barlow, then ambassador of the young Republic. When Mrs. Barlow went to Plombieres for a cure, Fulton was in the party and made the acquaintance there of Josephine Bonaparte, wife of the First Consul of that period, later the Emperor Napoleon. Through her, Napoleon became interested in Fulton's invention but he decided eventually that France could make no use of it.

Through his influential friends,

Fulton succeeded in having a dyke built to raise the level of the lake at Plombieres and thus provide a sufficient depth of water for the small experimental craft he built there. It was driven by a paddle-wheel coupled to a steam engine, and the country-folk came from miles around to see the oddity.

The monument to Fulton is to be raised at the spot where the steamboat of 1802 set out from the lake shore.

Gandhi will attend the forthcoming London conference clad in his well-known loincloth. English tailors and dressmakers are worried.

Most politicians will hop on the bandwagon with alacrity when convinced of its identity.

LIABLE TO ARREST FOR USE OF OLD LICENSE PLATES

Traffic officers have been notified by Raymond Cato, superintendent of the California Highway Patrol, to stop all motor vehicles found on the highway hereafter displaying 1930 license plates, and make an investigation to determine why 1931 plates have not been secured.

Unless the operator of the vehicle is able to submit some proof that he has made application for new plates, a citation of arrest must be given him as required by the motor vehicle act. Superintendent Cato advised officers that all applications received for 1931 plates by the Division of Motor Vehicles have been filled and the plates mailed out.

There are a few cars, however, not displaying the new plates because of incorrect addresses, application involving transfer fees, failure to make correct clearance, or similar reasons. In each case the officer will investigate the facts and report.

Evidence that the application for new plates, such as check stub, postal or money order receipts, etc., will be accepted by the officers.

SLASH PINE PAPER

Recent investigations into the suitability of slash pine for the manufacture of newsprint paper should be of practical interest to publishers of newspapers and readers as well, because it has long been feared that with the depletion of Canadian forests a paper famine might ultimately result.

After exhaustive tests, Dr. Charles H. Herty, former president of the American Chemical Society, declares Southern slash pine as well adapted to paper making as Canadian spruce, while it can be delivered to the mills at a much lower price. He states that Canadian spruce wood costs $18 or more per cord, but that the slash pine can be supplied for $6.

Practically unlimited quantities of this pine are available in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida, according to Dr. Herty, who makes this optimistic prediction:

"I believe that I shall live to see the day when young Southern pine will furnish the newsprint paper supply for the whole United States."

Fifty-five bosses in as many years is the record of Sir William Jameson Soulsby, yet he held one job all that time. He has just retired after serving as secretary to fifty-five Lord Mayors of London. FLOWER SHOW AT SAN MATEO

Spring, in all its fresh, colorful glory, will be personified in the Flower Show of the Burlingame-San Mateo Garden and Flower Club, to be held April 25 and 26, at the Peninsula Avenue school, San Mateo.

The golden eschscholtzia, our beloved California poppy, which makes the hillsides seem sunny even on a gray day, the lovely blue lupin, the Indian paint-brush, with its gay stalks, and all varieties of native wild flowers for which the state is famous, will be accorded a place in the show. Prizes of ribbons, trophies and cash will be offered for various entries, according to A. J. Butler, president of the Club.

Schools and organized groups are working assiduously on miniature gardens, floral art prints, and pressed flower booklets. These divisions will also exhibit named varieties of cut shrubs and trees, native ferns, models of boats, and airplanes made in flowers, potted plants, and cut blooms.

Amateur gardeners are asked to show what they can do with the sweet-smelling stock, the yellow and orange calceolarias, snapdragons, sweet williams, iris, godetias, pansies, the sweet pea, in all its rainbow tints, and the rose, queen of all. The old-fashioned wall flower is also bidden to the fiesta. Enough of beauty and fragrance to satisfy the souls of all!

The beautiful peninsula estates will send their quota of greenhouse plants and flowers, rhododendrons, roses, and calceolarias. The families of professional gardeners are also invited to exhibit the fruit of their endeavor. Mrs. C. W. Sait, of Burlingame, secretary of the Club, urges everyone to exhibit something. April 22 is the last day on which entries may be filed with her, and exhibits must be in place by April 25.

"I thought you might be. One can't treat one's fiancée so casually and hope to escape unscathed, Elmer. I'd feel badly at such treatment myself."

"She's not my fiancée."

"But you told me she was. You jilted me for her. Surely you must have been quite certain of your ground before you disclosed your altered feelings toward me."

"Well, she's no fiancée of mine," he protested doggedly.

"Then, pray, what is she? A friend?"

"Not any more."

"An enemy?"

"Perhaps."

"Elmer, did you promise to lend her the money or give it to her?"

"She asked for a loan."

"For how long. Did she offer any security?"

"No security. It was a Kathleen Maybourne loan."

"I don't understand, Elmer."

"It may be for years and it may be forever," he quoted from the Celtic ballad.

"But you agreed to make the loan, didn't you?"

"Certainly. Didn't I send my check?"

"You did. It's too bad you didn't send her the cash—by express. Then your ex-sweetheart wouldn't have learned your silly secret, and you wouldn't now face the necessity for running away because you're afraid to face me again. Elmer darling, I very greatly fear you're just a little bit cowardly."

He was stung to the core of his being. "I'm not a coward," he replied coldly. "I have a Distinguished Service cross to prove that."

"Poof! That's animal courage. I was referring to moral courage."

Elmer saw he was outnumbered and outmaneuvered and if he would escape annihilation, he must withdraw from the fight forthwith. "That sort of talk will never get you anywhere with me," he warned her. "I'm quite capable of attending to my own business."

"You've certainly been mismanaging it lately. Without my volunteered help you would be absorbing a thousand dollar loss right now, and with that little gold digger on your hands you'd be operating in red ink before the first of the year."

"Who told you she was a gold digger?"

"You did."

"I didn't."

"Not in so many words. But you stopped payment on your check, which is an admission that you suspect she is a gold digger."

"Well, that's my business, and I don't see any necessity for arguing the matter with you. It's a closed chapter."

"My word, you're an optimist. What caused you to stop payment of your check?"

"That's some more of my business."

"You're so immersed in your business you haven't had the decency to thank me for saving you a thousand dollars and possible entanglement with an adventuress. Elmer, in addition to being a little bit cowardly I'm afraid you're a little bit unmanly and a little bit ungrateful."

"Nellie," he said huskily, "I'm guilty on all three counts. I'm terribly sorry. Ordinarily I wouldn't—that is, I couldn't—I mean to you—you're so fine I—I—Nellie, I'm not very happy and I want to go away and forget it. I'm ashamed to look you in the eye."

"I understand thoroughly, Elmer. Well, you're forgiven everything—all except running away like a tin-canned dog. Really, you act as if you are horribly afraid of something."

"I am, but I can't discuss it over the telephone. Tell you what I'll do, Nellie. I'll delay my departure and you come to dinner with me tonight."

"I'd love to, Elmer, but not tonight. But I can go with you tomorrow night. I'm too busy to see you before then."

Reluctantly Elmer agreed to her counter proposal and Nellie, hugely satisfied with herself, hung up and returned to the bank, where she wrote the following letter to J. Fitzgerald, acting captain of detectives, Los Angeles police department:

"Dear Captain Fitzgerald:

"With reference to the matter we discussed over the long-distance telephone, when I told you that a check in favor of Doris Gatewood had been received at this bank and was being returned with the notation 'Signature of Indorser Irregular':

"You will be glad to know that your action in conforming to my request and mailing anonymously to Mr. Clarke the police records and rogues' gallery photographs of Colorado Charley has borne rich fruit. Within a few minutes after its receipt Mr. Clarke called at the bank and ordered payment stopped on the check. He was much disturbed. Shortly thereafter he purchased two thousand dollars' worth of travelers' checks here, so I realized he was about to leave the state."

"Immediately I made it my business to call him up and ascertained, without letting him know I was pumking him, that he is frightened and panicky. Evidently he has compromised himself, probably in writing, and now fears reprisals from the outraged and disappointed lady in the shape of a suit for breach of promise. My personal opinion is, however, that now they will endeavor to extract as large a cash settlement as possible, guaranteeing no publicity in return. Of course we must protect him by catching them in the act of levying blackmail, and if Mr. Clarke fled the state we couldn't do that, could we? So I have managed to delay his departure forty-eight hours."

"This letter will reach you via the same train that carries Mr. Clarke's rejected check back to the Los Angeles bank. In fact, it will reach you earlier than that, because I am sending it special delivery. Immediately upon receipt of it, please arrange to have the movements of this unsavory couple watched and report to me by telephone."

"Yours truly,
"Nellie Cathcart."

CHAPTER XI

The following afternoon Nellie received a long distance call from Los Angeles. Acting Captain of Detectives J. Fitzgerald was reporting.

"Sent a man out to watch the house as soon as I got your letter," he announced. "The bank must have telephoned them about the check, for at half past ten they called a taxi and went down to the office of a shyster attorney. They were there two hours and then returned to the bungalow. As soon as my man reported they were in conference with that particular lawyer the whole thing was as clear as mud."

"They're going up to Pilarcitos to shake the boy down as sure as death and taxes, so I have started two good men for Pilarcitos in a fast automobile. They will install a dictograph in the young fellow's house and listen in on the unholy proposition. I want you to provide a fast and accurate stenographer to take down every word. Can you do that?"

"I'm the fastest and most accurate stenographer in this county," Nellie replied quietly.

"Good girl! Now, then, I'm going to leave it to you to arrange for a clear field for my men. They've got to be alone in that house for an hour."

"I have already arranged that. I will explain the details to your representative when he calls tomorrow morning."

"Thanks. We'll land 'em out in the tall grass, never fear. I'll phone you if anything new develops."

He did—at eight-thirty a. m. next day, to report that Colorado Charley and his lady friend had purchased tickets from Los Angeles to Pilarcitos and return; that they were due in Pilarcitos at nine-two that night.

At ten o'clock a sleepy-looking man walked into the bank and immediately sought Nellie Cathcart's window, a small gold sign bearing Nellie's name serving as a clue.

"I'm Detective Sergeant Fahey, from Los Angeles," he announced. "The chief sent me an' my partner up with orders to report to you."

"I'm pleased to meet you, Mr. Fahey. Here are your instructions," and she handed him a sealed envelope. "Good morning!"

"Just met the smartest Jane in the world," Mr. Fahey confided to his partner, Detective Sergeant Abraham Lipowsky, when he rejoined the latter on the sidewalk. "She takes no chances on bein' seen in long, earnest conversation with a strange man, so she had the dope all typed out an' waitin' for us. 'Pleased to meet you. Goodby,' says she."

He tore open the envelope and read to Lipowsky:

"Colorado Charley and Mae are due in Pilarcitos at 9:02 tonight. They will probably go direct to Mr. Clarke's house, a shingled bungalow, at No. 302 C street, corner of Hazel drive."

"At seven o'clock tonight Mr. Clarke will leave his home to take me to dinner. He will not return until shortly after ten o'clock. As soon as he has left the house his colored servant will go uptown to spend the evening. You can gain entrance to the house by using a skeleton key on the kitchen door, the lock of which is simple and old-fashioned, since burglars seldom operate in Pilarcitos."

"You can set up your dictograph behind the old hair sofa in the parlor and run your wires along the edge of the wall, draw them up back of the piano and out the window, around the back of the house to the garage. Nobody will disturb you there as Mr. Clarke keeps his car in an uptown garage."

"When Mr. Clarke drops me at my house and proceeds to the uptown garage, I will come over to his garage with a large flashlight torch, a stenographer's notebook and several sharp pencils. The fender of the flyer will serve as a desk. I will knock twice on the door—a pause between each rap. The rest I leave to you."

"Well, what do you know about that damsel?" said Detective Sergeant Lipowsky.

"I'd ask her to marry me if I stood a Chinaman's chance—which I don't," Detective Sergeant Fahey replied sadly.

Promptly at seven o'clock Elmer called for Nellie and carried her off to Joe Angelotti's road house for dinner. Not once during the ride out did Nellie refer to Elmer's unfortunate predicament, seemingly she was not interested in it and not until they were halfway through dinner did Elmer broach the subject himself.

"Can't linger to do any dancing here tonight, Nellie. I must get home early."

Nellie seemed disappointed, so he hastened to excuse his action.

"I'm afraid I'm in for a bad hour between nine and ten tonight, Nellie. I had a wire from Doris Gatewood this morning. She's coming up to see me and she asked me to be at home tonight."

"Now, what do you suppose she wants?" Nellie's tones were freighted with a languid interest. She helped herself to an olive and ate it with relish. Elmer, watching her sharply, was reassured.

"Well, of course, in so far as that young lady is concerned I've done an about-face, so I suppose she wants an explanation."

"She doesn't want any explanation. She doesn't even want your affection. All she's after is your cash."

"Well, of course, I did promise her the thousand dollars; I dare say she predated certain payments on that promise and my reversal of form has probably embarrassed her greatly. I'm a little sorry the lady lost, but— a little glad I won! Of course," he added parenthetically, "I never was the least bit in love with her. She went to my head, like champagne, when I was with her, but when I wasn't I found it hard to keep up steam. Nellie, I must have been crazy to tell you to play second fiddle."

"If we are to be judged by the worst we do in this world, Elmer, we'd all be out of luck. Now, when I look over my mental ledger account with you, I see a long string of golden credits—page after page of them—and on the debit side I find one little human entry under the explanatory head of Doris Gatewood. This lone debit item is composed of equal parts of blindness, repression, curiosity, stupidity, flattered ego, childishness, masculine idiosyncrasy and original sin. You didn't fall without a battle and when you fell you hurt everything that was fine and decent in you—and knew it. You weren't really happy in your new conquest. You only told yourself you were. And as for little Nellie Cathcart thinking for an infinitesimal fraction of a second that she could pos-

Average Length of Life Constantly on Increase

Figures based on the census of 1920 show that the expectation of life in the United States at birth is 56.4 years (55.3 for males and 57.5 for females). About 50 years ago it was only 40 years. The World Almanac quotes Dr. Louis Dublin, insurance statistician, as saying that the expectation of life has increased but the span of life has remained stationary. He states: "That 20 years have been added to the average length of human life since public health work began to be actively practiced in the early eighties of the last century is true. But this gain can be traced to the reduced mortality of infants and to the cutting down of the unnecessary and preventable deaths of young people from typhoid fever, diphtheria, scarlet fever, smallpox and a host of other diseases which, for the most part, sibly descend to playing second fiddle to that baby-faced doll—well, Elmer, you are a sweet fool! Why, I'm the whole orchestra. I suppose, Elmer, it never occurs to you that I am a designing, scheming, farseeing, selfish girl where you are concerned."

He laughed derisively. "Tell me another joke," he pleaded.

"You're a hopeless idiot, Elmer. You will persist in making an angel out of a human being. Well, have one little dance with me and then we'll go home and commence your education."

When Elmer dropped Nellie off at her home he had the audacity, the monumental masculine assurance, to attempt to claim a good night kiss. Nellie laughed at him. "I'll not kiss you good night," she declared, "because I'm not particularly desirous of kissing you and you've forfeited the right to ask it." He drove away chop-fallen to a degree.

The instant his car had turned the corner Nellie came out of the house and ran all the way to within a block of Elmer's bungalow. As she passed down C street and turned into Hazel drive she observed a man and woman seated on Elmer's front steps, with a suitcase and a bag reposing beside them. Elmer's garage stood at the rear of the lot and opened on Hazel drive, so Nellie walked boldly up to the door, gave the prearranged signal and was accorded instant admittance.

"They're waiting for him," said Detective Sergeant Fahey out of the corner of his mouth.

"I saw them. Elmer will be along in five minutes," Nellie gasped. "Is everything all right?"

"Tight as a fox," said Detective Sergeant Lipowsky.

"Elmer will come down C street in the direction of Hazel drive. He's expecting them, so there will not be any talk on the porch. He'll take them inside immediately. However, one or both of you might go out to the corner of the house and listen."

The two detectives waited five minutes and followed her suggestion. Presently they returned on velvet feet. "All he said was 'Good evening. Please come inside and we'll talk.' All the woman said was: 'You know it!'"

Nellie wrote that brief record in shorthand. Detective Sergeant Fahey clamped the receivers over her ears and held the flashlight for her as she spread her note book out on the front fender of the flyer, leaned over it and prepared to take dictation. The two detectives were also listening in.

Elmer unlocked his front door, switched on the light and walked on into his bedroom to put away his overcoat and hat before returning to the stuffy little parlor where his Nemesis awaited him. Nellie thrilled with a vast pride as his first words came clearly to them via the concealed dictograph. The eyebrows of the two detectives went up and Detective Sergeant Fahey dropped his prognathous jaw in a comical grimace, for without an instant's hesitation Elmer had seized the initiative by going directly to the attack.

"Well, Colorado Charley, old settler," he began blithely, "how about a little drink to wash the dust of travel out of your lying throat? I mean a drink of water. I wouldn't waste liquor on a skunk like you."

"Say, Colorado Charley came back at him, 'where do you get that stuff?'" "Draw it out of a faucet," chirped Elmer cheerfully. "Doris, or whatever your real name is, you wired me for a conference, but you didn't tell me this confidence man was coming with you. Let's understand each other, Doris. Your boy friend here is out of the picture. Charley, if I hear one peep out of you I'll knock you for a double loop. That being clearly understood, say your say, Doris, and then get to blazes out of here before I throw you out."

Followed about five seconds of profound silence, then:

"Hands up, Charley, my boy! Don't pull the gun—please. There, that's ever so much more sensible. You don't suppose I'd be boob enough to go into conference with Doris, in your presence, without heeling myself, do you? Stand up now and back slowly toward me while I help myself to that little pistol of yours. Here's the gun, Charley. I'll keep the cartridges. Well, Doris, dear lost light of my life, you were about to say something!"

A political situation, presumably without precedent in California municipal campaigns, developed at Monterey recently when three former mayors of Monterey became candidates for councilmen at the election to be held May 11. The candidates are Carmel Martin, mayor from 1911 to 1913; J. P. Dougherty, mayor from 1919 to 1923, and B. F. Wright, mayor from 1923 to 1925.

With indications pointing to a heavy demand for rice during the coming year growers in the Glenn-Colusa district are expected to plant between 26,000 and 30,000 acres this season, it was learned. Last year only 19,000 acres were planted.

Forfeiture of a grant of right of way owned by the Tujunga Water and Power Company in the Angeles National Forest, Los Angeles county, was ordered by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. The Circuit Court held the water company failed to comply with the terms of its contract with the government whereby it had agreed to construct a water reservoir in Tujunga Canyon.

About this time last year thousands of wild pigeons were settling on the vineyards of the great Di Giorgio ranch in the Arvin district and doing great damage. Though protected by State law, the situation with respect to the pigeons became so bad that hunters were allowed to shoot many of the birds. This year officials of the Fish and Game Commission, in the city recently, report that none of the birds have been seen this year. Where they have gone or what has become of them seems unknown.

Mountain View raised its $7500 quota of the county fund amounting to $100,000 for the purchase of the naval dirigible site, in less than a week by subscription. Recovering, he returned to Martinez, declaring he had left a diamond ring and purse at the county hospital. First official estimates of the 1931 Valencia orange crop in Northern Orange county released by the Northern Orange County Citrus Exchange shows that between 75 and 85 per cent of the record-breaking 1929 crop will be harvested. Sizes are small but are showing improvement, the exchange, announces, and by May 1, when heavy shipping is expected to begin, a fair run of medium sizes is expected. Packing of Valencias will depend upon the navel market which still is receiving good fruit in sufficient quantities to meet demands, according to George Crawford, assistant manager of the exchange.

Statewide signboard regulation measure may soon have "teeth" put in them, in order that the scenic beauty of California highways may be preserved. Licensing of each individual signboard as it is erected, and only after the written signature of the owner of the property has been secured, is the course probably to be taken. This method is proposed by the state and central coast highway committees of the California State Chamber of Commerce, headed by A. Emory Wilson, in order that peace officers may readily "spot" illegally placed billboards and demolish them. It is the explanation of O. L. Willette, chairman of the chamber's central coast highway committee, that although it is already against the law to place signs without gaining the property owners' permission, it has heretofore been difficult to tell whether it has been obtained.

California last year again shared with New York the distinction of being the only two states in the Union with a total motor vehicle registration in excess of two million. This is revealed by a compilation made by the California State Automobile Association based upon reports obtained from the various states on their 1930 registration totals. These figures show the following: California—Total, 2,099,293. This includes 1,941,969 passenger automobiles, the remainder consisting of trucks, trailers and motorcycles. New York—Total, 2,347,011. This includes 1,926,013 passenger automobiles, and the remainder various types of other motor vehicles. In the proportion of motor vehicle registration to population, California remained far in the lead of New York and every other state as the premier motoring state of them all. With the 1930 census showing a population of 5,677,251, California had one motor vehicle for approximately each 2.8 persons. Six states recorded registration totals in excess of one million vehicles each. These states were Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas and Massachusetts.

The city of San Francisco was awarded third place in the health contest conducted by the United States Chamber of Commerce, it was revealed by the local Chamber of Commerce officials. Detroit won first place.

Gov. Rolph has appointed three Imperial county residents members of the board of the Forty-fifth District Agricultural Association in that county. The appointees are: J. R. Snyder of Holtville, J. C. Archais of Brawley and C. A. Sperry of Calipatria.

LOW WATERS BRING GRIEF TO FISHERMEN OF STATE

Low water in the rivers is creating a serious problem for the fish culturist this year, according to reports at the Division of Fish and Game. In many localities along the coastal streams the water is so low that the fish are unable to reach the egg collecting stations and it has been found necessary to construct temporary locations farther down the river.

It has also been reported that many fish are spawning near the mouths of the rivers, and this is given as an indication of a very poor season. The fish, however, are in good condition. Planting activities this season will be exceedingly difficult because of the drought. Probably many tributaries will have to be eliminated in order to get the best results from the trout raised.

It is impossible at this time to predict what conditions will be by vacation time.

Correct this sentence: "Man wants but little here below."

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla. C. H. Brockhagen, publisher of the Portland, Oregon, Telegram, says:

That a temporary shack can be thrown together anyhow and anywhere, but when a man sets out to put up a skyscraper he sinks his foundations down to bed-rock. The taller the structure is to be and the longer its life expectancy, the more important it is that its framework should be fastened fast to something substantial and permanent.

In a sense, the same principle applies to the building of a community. The enterprises that are floated on a wave of hot air, in a flurry of fictitious values, are seldom able to stand the shock when fictions shake down to facts and the wave flattens into the goldrums of business depression.

On all sides one finds encouraging evidence that business in America scraped the bottom along about the first of the year and that the upturn is beginning to commence.

Now is the time of all others when the alert business man and the progressive community can best build for the future. Prices are down. There is available plenty of competent labor, so eager for employment that it will give a generous dollar's worth for every wage dollar. These are bargain days for actual construction of new buildings, the widening of streets, the erection of needed bridges, the equipment of parks and playgrounds, and all the physical improvements that make for community progress.

This is the well known "psychological moment" for sizing up the community situation and making plans for the future. The last year has been a testing time that has not been without its useful lessons. After a fire, a community is rebuilt with fireproof buildings. After an earthquake, men try to build walls that will stand strain and stress.

The community that starts now to build for the future, exercising that canny combination of courage and caution which recent months have taught us, will find itself well in the lead when the rest of the world wakes up to the fact that the business cloud is thinned out and the silver lining is shining.

FINANCE AIDS THE POOR

Small town newspapers frequently tell some of the most interesting stories that get into print, says a city editor. For instance, there is the account of a woman, more than 70 years old, who went to Chicago recently to ask about a friend's life savings, $2,600, invested in bonds on which interest payments had ceased.

A woman on her deathbed presented the bonds to her elderly friend in Kentucky, with the promise that she should expend the income from them on the support of the dying woman's child. They were bonds of George F. Forman & Co., long an world-known investment house, but they became affected in the depression. Now the woman has exchanged the bonds for those of the George M. Forman Realty Trust, of Chicago, organized to bring a return of income under a plan that was evolved by a committee under C. S. Tuttle, vice-president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, and she counts on being able soon to devote the interest once again to the care of the dependent girl.

An invalid Wisconsin woman with an insane daughter, a 71-year-old Russian in South Dakota, an Indiana woman holding bonds in trust for her daughter, are others described in the news article, as exchanging bonds to aid the Trust.

Here is human interest of the most affecting sort. And this work of conserving the little estates of thousands of small investors is being done, of all places, in Chicago. The metropolis takes on new significance with this recital of financial good sense and Christian good will.

VETS SEEK COMPENSATION

The average loan being received by the veterans on their adjusted compensation certificates under the new 50 per cent borrowing provision is $333, according to advices received by James K. Fisk, State Adjutant of the American Legion for the Veterans' Bureau. Up to March 14 there were 1,372,006 applications filed and 282,876 checks, amounting to $104,350,000 mailed by the regional offices of the bureau. It is anticipated that by May 14 the peak of applications will be reached and the load will be reduced to normalcy.

Biblical Fruit Not the

Apple of Modern Times

The apple is so common and at the same time so highly esteemed a fruit that the action of the translators of the Bible in translating the Hebrew word 'Tappuch' "apple" need not be wondered at.

Evidently the tappuch was a well-known, cultivated tree in the Holy land with a sweet, fragrant, strengthening fruit (Song of Solomon III 5, VII 8, VIII 5) and a tree giving shade, therefore of some size. According to Joel I 12, it was also a tree so well known, so useful, that its withering was a calamity, a curse to the country. To our translators the apple would be just such a tree to English-speaking people and so we have the word in our Bibles.

Apple is often used figuratively by English people, as oak-apple for the oak-gall, the apple of the eye, rose-apple, etc., as befitting any round fruit or thing, and so might have seemed to the makers of our Authorized Version a good loosely fitting name to apply to an unknown fruit.

That it was correctly applied is not possible. The climate of Palestine is too hot for this tree, which thrives in more northerly temperatures. Up north of Palestine in Syria near Damascus it is found and bears fruit. There are a few apple trees here and there in the Holy land, but these are usually barren, are of late post-Christian days, and are by no means highly esteemed.—Montreal Family Herald.

Memories Brought Back

by Distinctive Perfume

The association of ideas as a spur to memory got another boost the other day when a reporter listened to some fascinating reminiscences of a world traveler. This man was journeying in a leisurely fashion through Switzerland one summer, and being something of a scholar and a collector of odd bits of information, he hit upon an idea that he believed might preserve for him the memory of his travels in undimmed beauty. He purchased a certain pleasing perfume and used it continually on his handkerchief during his travels. About a year or so later he was ready for his experiment and putting some of the same perfume on a handkerchief, he asked his valet to place it near him some time when he was sleeping. He declared that the scheme worked like a charm, that he had a most delightful dream in which the scenes through which he had passed on his travels through Switzerland passed in a series of identical pictures before his vision before he awoke.

Promise Had String to It

In one of the 5 and 10 cent stores, a customer selected a large purchase of Christmas tree lights.

She explained to the clerk that she wasn't positive that the type of bulbs she was buying would fit the sockets she had at home.

"I suppose," said the woman, "I can bring these bulbs back, if they don't prove suitable."

"Certainly, you can bring them back," the clerk assured her unsmilingly. The money was passed, the package wrapped and the deal completed. Then the clerk made herself a bit clearer.

"You can bring 'em back," she repeated, "but we aren't allowed to make any refunds."—Concord Monitor.

Howlers

The "Book of Howlers," recently published in England, gives some excellent examples of unconscious school boy humor, for instance:

"The Corps Diplomatique is a per son who shams dead."

"A Conservative is a kind of green house where you look at the moon."

"Many people say Free Trade is better than Perfection."

"Our country has a king who can't do anything but what he ought to do."

"A King is the son of his father, but a President is not."

"Miss Olinal is the ruler of Italy."

"Holland is a low, lying country and is damned all round."—Vancouver Province.

Politician's Requisite

Isocrates was an orator in Athens, and to him came others, students of elocution, to learn his art.

One day there came a man to him named Creon, who wanted to become famous as a political spellbinder.

"You'll have to pay double fees if you want that kind of instruction," said Isocrates.

"Why shall I have to pay more than those other fellows studying forensic eloquence?" asked the prospective pupil.

"Because I shall have to teach you two arts," replied Isocrates, the teacher of rhetoric. "First I must teach you speaking and, second, keeping silent."

Tonic in Laughter

To laugh long and heartily is a splendid tonic. Many a dyspeptic could be cured if he laughed heartily, two or three times a day.

Most of us are quite aware of the wonderful power of laughter. Even to hear others laugh does us good. And yet our knowledge does not compel us to give laughter its rightful place in our lives.

If only we could learn to look for the priceless tonic which lurks behind the most commonplace things and take frequent doses of it how much happier and healthier we would be.—Exchange.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

The person who, through carelessness, causes a fire is in exactly the same class as the motorist whose carelessness results in damage to the property or lives of others.

There is no such thing as an "individual fire." The deficit it creates must be paid for, in one way or another, by the entire community. For instance, when John Jones' factory burns, it is not only John Jones who suffers—but all his employees, and all other property owners who must make up the taxes lost through the fire. No company has yet written an insurance policy which in the broader sense compensates for lost time, lives, opportunity, livelihood.

The citizen who allows fire hazards to go untended in his home or place of business, who fails to take every measure that makes for fire prevention, is not only derelict in his duty to the community—he is a direct menace to the lives and property of all other citizens.

Mary Angeline Cappuccelli, 10, of Albuquerque, N. M., who has been appointed as a personal page to Speaker Alvin N. White, is the first girl page to ever serve in the New Mexico legislature.

WOMAN'S DIVIDENDS WILL PAY FUTURE GAS BILLS

Natural gas service at a net cost of nothing per month looks like a certainty for Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Danford, 915 Quintara street, San Francisco, on a program Mrs. Danford figured out a year or so ago.

Mrs. Danford got the idea when her first month's bill for natural gas showed a saving of 50 per cent as compared with other fuels. She banked the money saved and has been banking her savings ever since. As the money accumulates, she buys P. G. & E. preferred stock. At the rate she's going, she declares it won't be long before she's drawing enough in dividends to pay her gas bills.

The plan will work. Many an electric consumer has carried out the same idea and now pays his bills with dividends on stock bought with savings made by substituting cheap electric power for older and more antiquated methods.

Elsie Muller, of New York, set a national record in the North American indoor ice-skating championship meet at the Chicago stadium recently when she dashed around the rink in two minutes 26 seconds.

VETERAN SUDDENLY PASSES ON

George Albert Grady, brother of the well known Mathew Grady, who conducts a butcher business in Colma, passed away last Saturday in a hospital in Redding. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORS HAVE PARTY AT THE BEACH

With the wind blowing half-a-gale at the beach, an enthusiastic group of Presbyterian young people from Grace church made their way to the beach for an old-fashioned weenie roast. A sheltered cove provided a place for a roaring fire and it struck the late hour of eleven before the young people decided it was time to come home. They invite young people of the town to meet with them in their meetings at 6:45 Sunday evenings.

If you only think you know your geography, you may be surprised by these facts, which are literal, with no jokers concealed in them: Reno, Nevada, famed divorce center, is about 100 miles farther west than Los Angeles; Cleveland is seven miles farther east than Jacksonville, Florida; to reach Canada by the shortest route from Detroit one must travel almost due south; the Pacific terminus of the Panama Canal is farther east than the Atlantic end; Arica, Chile, on the Pacific, is farther east than New York. If you don't believe all this, look on the map.

Meddlers are always busy. When an Indiana man was peacefully supporting two wives on $35 a week, the neighbors up and had him arrested for bigamy.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard
VOLUME 4 FRIDAY, APRIL 17, 1931 NUMBER 38

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

The Retort Courteous A Minneapolis man who happened to be over in St. Paul the other day sauntered into a fruit store, and picking up a large melon, asked with a sneer:

"Is that the largest apple you have in St. Paul?"

"Hey!" bellowed the proprietor, "put that grape down."

Wife: "Are all men as stupid as you?" Husband: "No; just think of all the bachelors."

Fresh: "I hear that old Skinner tried to cheat the undertaker." Innocent: "How did he do that?" Fresh: "Just before he died he buried his face in his hands."

What He Wanted A man who had been waiting patiently in the post office could not attract the attention of either of the girls behind the counter.

"The evening cloak," explained one of the girls to her companion, "was a redingote design in gorgeous lame brocade, with fox fur and wide pagoda sleeves."

At this point the long-suffering customer broke in with: "I wonder if you could provide me with a neat red stamp with a dinky perforated hem, the tout ensemble delicately treated on the reverse with gum arabic. Something about 2 cents."

The book salesman knew his job. "This book," he said, "will do half your work for you."

"Good," was the reply. "I'll take two."

Coupla Sizes Larger, Please!

Once upon a time there was a man who bought a Louis XIV bed, but it was too small for him, so he sent it back and asked for a Louis XVI.
